Ensuring the rights, freedoms and legitimate interests of youth, preserving the life and health of youth, ensuring the spiritual, intellectual, physical and moral development of youth based on the priorities of state policy regarding youth in the Republic of Uzbekistan. “support, ensuring open and high-quality education for youth, creating conditions for employment of youth and their employment, development of youth in the spirit of patriotism, citizenship, tolerance, respect for laws, national and universal values, harmful” to educate people capable of resisting secrets and currents, to have strong beliefs and outlook on life, protect young people from actions leading to violations of moral principles, from terrorism and religious extremism, separatism, fundamentalism, violence and cruelty”, support and encourage talented and gifted youth, develop in young people the desire for a healthy lifestyle, and also create conditions for the full organization of free time for young people and the mass development of children’s and youth sports, provide support to young families with “spiritual and material support”, development issues are given attention to the implementation of a comprehensive system of measures to create decent housing and social conditions for them, as well as cooperation with international organizations operating in the field of realization of the rights and freedoms of youth.[1]

Increasing the legal culture of young people, increasing their activity in the processes of building a democratic state and developing civil society; raising patriotic youth with high morale, independent thinking, a strong life position, broad outlook and deep knowledge, developing immunity against various ideological threats; social protection of young people, creating suitable conditions for them to master modern professions, providing them with work and involving them in entrepreneurship; support for talented youth, systematic implementation of activities aimed at realizing their creative and intellectual potential; widespread involvement of young people in regular physical education and sports, promotion of a healthy lifestyle among young people; prevention of delinquency and crime among minors and youth; the effective use of the media and modern information and communication technologies in raising a competent generation are the main directions of youth policy.

The fact that the issue of identifying talented youth and their education has risen to the level of state policy has allowed us to accumulate valuable experience in our country. It should be emphasized here that, along with government organizations, our country is actively searching for talented youth and supporting them. For example, it is especially important that one of the main directions of state youth policy is aimed at supporting the talents and abilities of young people. It should be noted that the objectives of this organization are to encourage talented and talented youth in the fields of education, science, technology, information technology, culture, art, sports and entrepreneurship, as well as support their various healthy initiatives. as one of the current tasks of the direction.

The qualities and social qualities of young people, such as the level of education, professional qualifications, moral and spiritual perfection, have a significant impact on the level of development of the entire society. Improving the living conditions of the population and achieving a happy life is an important indicator of the development of today's modern statehood.

Perfection in a person lies, first of all, in understanding freedom of thought, thinking and practical activity. In this sense, the call of the great Greek philosopher Socrates "Know thyself" is also a call to understand one's origin, the meaning of life, one's responsibility and obligations to future generations. The main indicator of perfection in any society is manifested in a person's attitude to goodness, social happiness, humanitarian ideals and practical activities based on them.[2]

It is worth noting that in recent years, thinking about the good of the nation, the Motherland, becoming a useful person in strengthening independence, thinking about personal interest are full of easy ways, due to the fact that some young people are not formed on a special, scientific basis. A feeling of longing for life. At the same time, some citizens exhibit moral limitations, a narrow worldview, non-compliance with national standards of decency, a gap between word and deed, lack of national pride and other unpleasant manifestations of “mass culture” them together.

Today, the ideology of most developed countries is based on universal human values and democratic principles. They give priority to the ideas of peace and development, human rights and freedom, national and religious harmony. Noble ideas based on these principles will serve the common good, a bright future, which is the eternal dream of humanity.[3]

As President Shavkat Mirziyoyev stated at the Youth Forum of Uzbekistan: “Whatever reforms we carry out in our country, we will primarily rely on young people like you, on your energy and determination. You all know very well that today We have set great goals for ourselves. We have begun to create the foundations of the Third Renaissance in our Motherland. We consider family, pre-school education, school and higher education, as well as scientific and cultural institutions to be the most important "Important links of the future Renaissance. That is why we are carrying out fundamental reforms in these areas. I believe that our dedicated and patriotic youth, like you, will actively participate and make a worthy contribution to the creation of a new basis for the development of our country."[3]

In conclusion, we can say that today, using the large-scale policy of our state aimed at creating a bright future for youth, creating broad opportunities and effective reforms, the youth of our country as a mature generation, every boy and girl, first of all, must be fluent in a foreign language, study computer fields in depth, be able to use the Internet, adhere to national and religious values, conduct scientific research and be selfless children. countries. It is these young people who can ensure the peace and tranquility of our country and determine the future. It is especially noteworthy that our youth considers it their sacred duty to build the great future of our country, solve the great problems facing us, defend our independence, and live according to the principle of harmony of national and universal values. in life. We have a moral basis for our bright intention to raise well-rounded youth. We believe that the Uzbek youth will defend our country as a country recognized by the world, and that the Uzbek people will never depend on anyone.[4]
