President Shavkat Mirziyoyev – "our youth is achieving world – wide success in business, science, culture, art, literature and sports. This gives great confidence in the prospect of our country, in the worthy continuation of the good deeds that our great ancestors began,"[1]. Also, "Dear Boys and girls! We have great ancestors who are worth admiring. We have immeasurable wealth that is worth admiring. And believe me, we will have a great future that is worth it if God desires. We know how much the bright future is justified above all by the fact that our entire generation, young people of all Uzbekistan, who come to life with the same ambitious, ardent dreams as you, no less, will build a bright future." At this point we consider it permissible to pass with emphasis. Because we can't imagine our future without analyzing our yesterday and without learning.

As we all know, once we have achieved the supreme blessing of independence, we have also achieved the right to live relying on our sacred tradition and national values. If before independence, we were not allowed to live a life based on traditions and values, in addition to realizing our identity, while without national customs and traditions there would be no nation. During those times, a number of other sacred national holidays such as Navruz, Ramadan, Kurban hayiti and others were banned. Attempts were made to erase the history of our past, as well as the names of our past Imam Bukhari, Imam Termiziy, Bahauddin Naqshband, Najmiddin Kubro, Amir Temur, great-great-grandfathers, Mahmudhaja Behbudiy, Abdulhamid Chulpan, Abdurauf Fitrat, Abdul Qadiri, from the memory of our people, in general “a People Without history, there will be no future”.

Any state is strong primarily in its high culture and spirituality. In this, it is important to instill our values, traditions and traditions in the minds of the growing younger generation, to educate them in the national spirit.

The role of national values in the process of education and upbringing is incomparable. Our national values — human foundations such as respect, kindness, patriotism, justice and respect for the family, serve to educate young people on the right path not only scientifically, but also spiritually, morally. These values, attached to our culture and traditions, ensure the place of the individual in society, his moral and spiritual development.

The book particularly emphasizes the importance of preserving, learning, and instilling our own national values in our youth, through which the right way of life and spiritual values are acquired. They form high qualities in society, such as justice, kindness and patriotism. The book focuses specifically on viewing spirituality as a powerful factor, its importance in human life, and its role in social progress.

Uzbek national values have been formed for centuries and are reflected in the traditions, customs, culture and way of life of our people. These values are not only our historical heritage, but also our spiritual foundations today. In our national values, basic principles such as humanity, patriotism, respect, justice and mutual assistance are embodied.

Before applying values in our educational and educational processes, we must consider the definitions and content of a number of basic concepts.

Values are diverse, within which the "highest value is man" is considered, and all other values serve him. Spiritual, historical and educational aspects of human value are based on specific new thinking and approaches.

Olima M.O. According to Inomova's interpretation, - "value is a material and spiritual need and interests that satisfy one or another need of a person or society and serve their benefit, which can become the basis for an approach to life in terms of value. Values in general are material and spiritual assets that are absorbed into the consciousness of a person who positively affects socio-political, economic and spiritual progress, both in the past, present and in the future, formed and developed in the process of the historical progress of the life of society.

The "Axiology" part of pedagogy is passed on values as a branch of science. "Axiology" (Greek value, education) is a branch of philosophy that studies the nature of values philosophically.

We will consider below the values found in several societies.

Respect for the family-our family, our ancestors are the main foundations of our culture. Family ties and affection are of great importance in our values. The family connects people not only biologically, but also spiritually. The role of parents in the family and their attention to the upbringing of children is very important for our people.

Kindness and help – asking for or helping, caring for each other, supporting each other in complex situations, which are also important aspects that are included in our national values. The quote "When you see a good deed, rejoice" expresses an appreciation of friendship, solidarity and social assistance in our people.

Patriotism-one of the main elements of our national values is, of course, patriotism. It is very important to love your homeland, respect its history, culture and teach its protection to the younger generation in the process of education and upbringing. By instilling these values in young people, they strive to be selfless in our country.

Respect and justice – in our values, great importance is attached to human rights, justice and respect. The phrase "stand in the way of Justice" encourages people to take into account not only their own interests, but also the interests of others. Teaching youth respect, cooperation and justice in the educational process helps them make the right decisions in their lives.

Traditions and Customs-our national traditions also occupy an important place. Several holidays in the year, such as Navruz, Ramadan Eid, Independence Day, activities that further enrich our national culture and encourage our young people to respect, appreciate their culture.

These values should be learned not only in relationships, but also in the process of education and upbringing. Through education, the absorption of these values into our youth serves to educate them not only as knowledge, but also as spiritual people. Also, our national values are in harmony with the modern world, helping us to live in understanding global culture, but without losing our own culture.

The book also talks about the need to harmonize our national values with the modern world, the importance of preparing young people for global culture as well. The power and use of our national values is cited as an important factor, especially in the educational process.

By teaching national values to the younger generation, we direct them not only to respect the traditions of their people, but also to expand their worldview, to make it open to global culture. Also, these values contribute to the creation of a unifying, sustainable society in the educational process. Therefore, it is the duty of each of us to preserve our national values and bring them to future generations.
